

Bank Roast

How to get your wiener roasted.

Another 4th of July has arrived. Wieners will be roasted, burgers will be eaten and people will celebrate the founding of this country.

The Seven of Many that Forged a Nation

John Adams, second president of the United States. John Jay, governor of New York and opponent of slavery. Benjamin Franklin, inventor extraordinaire. Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States and the principal author of the Declaration of Independence. George Washington, first president of the United States and credited with the victory over the British. Alexander Hamilton, first United States Secretary of the Treasury, founder of the Bank of New York. James Madison, fourth president of the United States.

One of the other founders

Patrick Henry opposed the United States Constitution in fear that it would affect the rights of the states and individual freedom. Today reflects that concern might have been valid where the few elected officials are influenced by their personal greed more so than by the interests of their voting constituents. One lawmaker commented that the banks have way too much influence. May those who feel man's fight is too great have an easier time fighting the flames of eternal damnation. For those who falter under financial pressure, remember the fight of this country's founding fathers.

Hell hath plenty of flame for an eternal wiener roast.
