

Blood and Money

Blood is Red – Money is Green

By James McGuire
(For DV, wherever he may be)

As one can't grow rhubarbs from marshmallow seeds, one can't squeeze money out of a turnip. Over the millennia, the money changers have planted the seeds of green within the laws of all lands which allowed the marshmallows to sprout roots, now; marshmallows can suck the blood out of turnips.

The long short, many of today's complex financial instruments were designed for one reason and one reason only; a method and means to allow for more blood sucking of money from the people. These puffed up marshmallow blood suckers could care less the money source, housing, 401(k), public retirement funds, institutional or private investors.

Greed laws offer illusion to the judiciary that justice is being executed in accordance to the best interest of the people when opining against the people. Herein, the judiciary is fanning the fire to cook the wieners of the people while the marshmallow avoids roasting.

In short order, why is the judiciary oblivious to the crimes? Ignorance? Lack of Understanding? Disbelief?

In the long order, will the judiciary pursue actions against those who took the judiciary's retirement? Will it be ignorance, lack of understanding or disbelief? Guess it's better to be late than never!

Good Morning you're Honor, how is the turnip picking today?
