The Banks v. The American People

Isoroku Yamamoto's sleeping giant quote:

"I fear all we have done is to awaken a sleeping giant and fill him with a terrible resolve."<sup>1</sup>

History of Pearl Harbor's attack should remind all that any attack upon this country will be met with resistance and the American people will band together to defeat the Evil.

It is of little difference as to whether the attack is by weapons of destruction or that of financial deceit. Appears the banks have forgotten history and are blinded by greed.

Americans are not far from social unrest and riots--would not take much more to upset peaceful mood of the nation. Washington is out of touch with taxpayers, Wall Street being rewarded for bad behavior, higher unemployment, more foreclosures, higher food and fuel prices and the perfect storm for taking up arms is here.<sup>2</sup>

Let us hope that Washington hears the voices of intelligence and wisdom of the people before armed conflict is the only option remaining.

Laws have been passed to provide the banks with whatever means are necessary to protect the banks interest and greed all in the name of Justice, phooey.

As L stated; "There will be no mountain tall enough, no building big enough, no airplane that can fly high enough for the banks to escape retaliation of the American people.

Before Armed conflict instills,
